French Government to Take the Lead in Drastic Measures.

Valliant Still Boasts Defiantly of His Exploit on Saturday.

(By Associated Press.)
PARIS, Dec. 11.—The excitement caused by the explosion of the saucisson bomb in the Chamber of Deputies on Saturday afternoon has far from subsided, and everybody is looking forward to this day's session of the Chamber, when most important matters affecting Anarchists will, it is expected, be brought forward.

If press utterances here indicate the real current of opinion, the explosion of the bomb thrown by Valliant, the Anarchist, is likely to greatly strengthen the hands of the Government and to bring about joint action with England, Spain, Italy and Austria at least, and probably Germany, for a combined movement looking to the suppression of Anarchy by the extradition and severe punishment of all who are proved to have engaged in Anarchist conspiracies.

During this morning Valliant was transferred from the Hotel Dieu to the infirmary of the Prison de la Santé. A large crowd was gathered outside the Hotel Dieu in anticipation of the removal of the bomb-thrower, and when he was brought out of the hospital the crowd shouted, "Death to the Anarchist!" "Hang him to a lamp-post!"

The police pushed back the crowd and Valliant was taken to the prison in safety. No arrests of Anarchists have been made to-day.

Valliant continues to glory in his dastardly deed, and only seems to regret that he did not succeed in killing or severely wounding M. Casimir-Perier, the Premier, and M. Dupuy, the President of the Chamber of Deputies. He still insists that he had no accomplices.

Valliant, when taken to the Hotel Dieu, gave the name of Marchal, already called in the Associated Press and it was only after the detectives had worked up his record, and after he was subjected to a short, sharp examination by the Public Prosecutor and Examining Magistrate, that he admitted his name that Valliant.

He took the name of Marchal, mainly to disguise himself and on account of the fact that he was living with a married woman named Marchal, after having stolen her from her husband. His own wife he deserted in America.

Marchal, the husband of Valliant's mistress, in an interview to-day, said that Valliant returned from America in January last and became a boarder in the Marchal household.

Valliant succeeded in inducing Mme. Marchal to sell and pledge the furniture belonging to her husband, and, after he had succeeded in doing this, he fled, leaving the woman to her fate.

The police, when announced this morning, during the investigation made into the explosion of Saturday, searched the apartment occupied by a man named Cohen, a Dutch Anarchist, and there found a number of copper tubes, which, it is said, were to be used in the manufacture of bombs.

The police also seized a bundle of documents of the utmost importance, as well as nearly 1,000 letters from Anarchists in all parts of Germany.

A despatch from Rome says that a resolution congratulating the French Deputies upon the capture of Valliant was introduced in the Chamber to-day.

A despatch from Budapest to-day, on behalf of the Extreme Left, expressed sympathy with the French Chamber of Deputies, saying that the Parliament would not be coerced by a handful of criminals.

At a Cabinet Council held this morning, after noon bills were agreed upon to be submitted to the Chambers to-day, providing for the repression of Anarchy. Casimir-Perier to represent the new measures to-day. He dwelt upon the necessity of passing them, saying they would not encroach upon true liberty. His remarks were greeted with prolonged cheering.

The first of these bills makes it a penal offense to publish incitements to commit outrages by the use of explosives.

JOHN I.'S TRAPS GONE.

Davenport's Papers and Records Thrown Out of His Old Rooms.

His Eviction from the Federal Building Now Complete.

Postmaster Dayton Doesn't Know What to Do with the "Cage."

An air of desolation hung over Rooms 174, 175 and 176, on the fifth floor of the Post-office Building, this morning. It was there that the great and only John I. Davenport held forth, but he will do so no longer. The eviction is now in progress and every article, every scrap of record that might serve to reveal any one of Davenport's plans, will before the day is over, have been shovelled out, as it were, and an army of washerwomen set at work to gather up even the dust of departed greatness.

Postmaster Dayton himself superintended the work of eviction. Several days ago he notified "John I." that everything must be cleaned out, and that the work would begin at 11 o'clock sharp. Davenport said he would be there himself to take one last look at it were, but somehow he did not materialize on time. The Postmaster waited until 11 o'clock, and then he instructed Assistant Custodian Michael Flaherty to go ahead. Soon all the reserve force of the custodian's staff was at work. Desks were turned upside down, files upon files of paper were bundled up, packed upon trucks and shovelled out the door. Sacred records, which with a proper key might have revealed the hidden ways that were dark, were tumbled out of cases and irreverently bundled in with the rest of the rubbish. Davenport's autograph given to divers persons as far back as 1872 were scattered with empty ink bottles, old newspapers, blank books and the like. Whether valuable or not, Mr. Davenport alone knows. They certainly were not of interest to the men who handled them this morning.

Davenport had spent nearly all of Friday and Saturday in the room preparing for his eviction. He had packed up his papers, and he then took away with him. Besides doing so, he made up about forty little bundles of papers, which he also packed up several rough paper boxes, filled to the top with documents said to be of the utmost importance to him. These boxes and parcels lay scattered around this morning, and on all of them was printed the following:

PERSONAL.
J. I. D.

Some of the irreverent ones thought it funny to change the initials so that most of the boxes read:

Postmaster Dayton had a room in the building specially prepared for the reception of Mr. Davenport's papers, and there they will remain until he brings along his own truck to remove them. Mr. Davenport claims several bookcases, filled to the top with maps of the world, and a large number of books. However, the Postmaster will not give up until he hears from the Treasury Department. The "cage" which Davenport had used for the incarceration of prisoners is being the Postmaster's office, and the Postmaster will be moved to the room which was formerly occupied by the Postmaster's office. The Postmaster will be moved to the room which was formerly occupied by the Postmaster's office.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., Dec. 11.—

As a policeman was passing L. Sterges's clothing store, on Main street, this village, about 11:30 o'clock last night, he found the store filled with smoke. A dim light was burning in the store.

Sterges resides near by, and the policeman went to his house and informed him that the store was on fire. They returned and put out the fire. The fire was supposed to have originated from an overheated stove.

About half an hour later, when the policeman passed the store again, he found the inside in a blaze. He quickly turned in an alarm, and the Fire Department responded. A strong wind was blowing, and in spite of the efforts of the firemen and citizens the flames spread to the adjacent buildings. The fire was extinguished by the fire department.

The fire on the east side of the Sterges building was the first of a series of fires which have been occurring in the vicinity of the Sterges building. The

AUSTIN CASE POSTPONED.

Col. James, for the Company, Has

Other Engagements.

One of the first cases called this morning on the Supreme Court calendar, in Part III, before Justice Trux, was that of the family of John C. Austin against the Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association.

Mr. Richard O'Gorman, who will conduct the case for the Austin family, stated he was ready to go to trial, but on account of imperative engagements, would be in the Court of Appeals all day. He proposed to be ready in the morning, when the case will be heard and tried.

The case is brought by the family of

John C. Austin, who claim he was accidentally drowned while bathing at Manhattan Beach July 3, 1891.

Several incidents connected with the alleged drowning, particularly the fact that the body was not recovered, excited

the suspicion of the Mutual Reserve

Fund Life Association, and an investigation was started.

The company says, in finding that

Austin was alive and well and enjoying life at Lake Saranac, in the Adirondacks.
